SketchUp: Project Spectrum

SketchUp is the most widely used 3D modeling software in the world. It is used in fields such as architecture, engineering, construction, video game development and more. Classes are led by Casey Grothus, a long-time SketchUp Project Spectrum participant.

Each class begins with teaching the basics of SketchUp. After getting a few of the basics down, the participants are encouraged to create projects based on their own interests and passions. Instruction includes both group learning and individualized support. They use a web version of SketchUp; there is nothing to download or prepare in advance. Classes last three hours and include breaks.
Classes are intentionally designed as a safe, supportive space where participants can be themselves without masking, explore new things, and build confidence and community. To see what a class is like, visit https://tinyurl.com/SketchUpProjectSpectrumClass.

When: April 11, 17, 25 (Online), June 22-26 (In Person), and July 20-24 (In Person)
Where: 10368 Westmoor Dr, Westminster, CO 80021
